

Rudd Center Legislation Database Methodology

Purpose

The Rudd Center Legislative Database (“Database”) was established with the intention of creating a streamlined access point for proposed legislation related to food policy issues. It was originally developed to track legislation related to the Rudd Center’s mission to promote solutions to childhood obesity, poor diet, and weight bias through research and policy. The Database is an aggregation of proposed state and federal bills, searchable by state, year, and topic. The bills within the Database are meant to provide researchers with a snapshot of the trends and type of legislation being introduced nationwide in the relevant fields: it does not include bill text analysis or evaluation and is not an exhaustive list of food policy bills.

Categories & Corresponding Search Strings

The Rudd Center has developed multiple categories (“labels”) within which to nest proposed legislation to make the data more accessible to researchers. The labels are listed below, including the subtopics of the types of bills generally included in each, the pertinent exclusions, and the corresponding search strings. The strings are periodically updated to ensure that they remain current and adaptive to detecting new trends. The search string development process was informed by the Westlaw Next Terms and Connectors Searching Guide, the Congress.gov search operator’s guide, and Rudd’s advocacy experience. As demonstrated below, some of the bills fall within multiple issue areas; consequently, the Database permits the placement of one bill in up to three separate categories.
